“Transnational commerce, migration, and culture have transformed the world into a single globalized marketplace” (T. Friedman, The World is Flat, Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 2005). This change of perspective (called “globalization”) has had an enormous impact not only on trade but also on many branches of the law, such as labor law. The course aims are providing students with the legal tools to deal with the contemporary process for determining, in particular, how to reach a balance between labor rights and economic interests in the global environment.

Prof. Francesca MARINELLI
University of Milan (Milan, Italy)
Associate Professor of Labour Law

Francesca Marinelli has been teaching for years both the course of Trade Liberalization and Labour Rights and the course of European Labour Law. She has an international experience as both Visiting Scholar and Lecturer (Loyola University of Chicago; University of Beijing; University of Olomouc; University of Cergy Paris) and speaker at several international conferences.
